

Okay so sense I've seen one or two other people this week come out I feel it's only appropriate that I finally nut up and come out myself

So um... basically

"She" is..... "She"

Okay seriously yeah
I am She/Her now

I've had several thoughts for several years about this but always dismissed them
It wasn't until June 30th of 2018 until I actually gave the thought more credit and finally explored my own gender, I always was afraid to becuz I've grown in a religious family and certain family members would fucking bust my kneecaps verbally if they found out.

But after presenting female to close friends made me feel a lot happier and I've given it a good almost 7 months of trying it out, I totally love the idea of my identity.

I've been dropping hints every now and again (The Actual She avatar in my recent commentaries and me on the side liking trans related tweets oof) but I was scared to come out for a while due to reasons I don't feel like getting into right now.

I wanna thank all my friends who helped me get to where I am now, I've had a lot of people support me and if I tried listing them all I'm afraid I might miss someone but

You fuckers know who you are c:

Oh

And before I forget

I'm not Rion anymore

New name's Rachael

Tho Rae for short is fine too

Thank you all for yalls time.